

WHOLE HEALTH: CHANGE THE CONVERSATION

Advancing Skills in the Delivery of
Personalized, Proactive, Patient-Driven Care

John W. McBurney, MD

John W. McBurney, MD, is a Clinical Assistant Professor of Neurology at the University of South Carolina in Greenville, SC. He is a graduate of Auburn University (WDE) and Emory University School of Medicine. Dr. McBurney performed his neurology residency and EEG/Epilepsy fellowship at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. He received the Erskine Graves award as the outstanding graduating fellow at Walter Reed in 1989. He is board certified in neurology, EEG/evoked potentials and sleep medicine.

Dr. McBurney held a variety of military assignments during his military career and co-founded the neurology residency at Madigan Army Medical Center. Military awards include the Army Commendation Medal, Meritorious Service Medal and the Legion of Merit. Additional recognitions include Best Doctors since 2005. In January 2014, Dr. McBurney completed the fellowship in integrative medicine at the Arizona Center for Integrative Medicine at the University of Arizona. He currently practices integrative medicine informed neurology, and sleep disorders medicine with the University Medical Group in Greenville, SC. He is passionate about integrative medicine and serves as the faculty advisor for the integrative medicine interest group at USC-Greenville School of Medicine. Personal interests include Ashtanga Yoga, meditation, cycling and music. His wife of 34 years, Jill, is a 500 hour registered yoga teacher and iRest teacher-in-training, level 1. They have 2 adult children, Chris and Erin.